Course Overview

Personal impact is not about being the loudest voice in the room—it’s about being the most effective. This course explores how individuals shape perceptions, build trust, and influence outcomes through their communication, presence, and behaviour. Throughout the day, participants will uncover how their habits, language, and non-verbal signals affect how others experience them. The course blends self-awareness with practical tools, enabling participants to intentionally adjust their approach to achieve better results in meetings, presentations, and everyday interactions. The day progresses from understanding self, to managing communication, to influencing others, ending with a personal action plan that translates insight into consistent behavioural change.
